

Design Notes (after initial build)

Isa Wilson (creative director) for Grace Kahler (designer)

- Header looks very clean and professional - representing the magazine like feel that we talked about
- The site information feels too spread out, almost as if the text is falling off of the sides of the page, create more space around the text sections to make it feel more condensed and easier to read
- The font size seems a bit large for each subtext, it's competing too much with the larger header being large as well - creating more contrast with a smaller subtext - reference common font-size for websites on google or figma community?
- Try sending the image to the back - using the z - axis function in css (this will help avoid having excessive negative space and allow the information to feel more unified)
- Be sure to include text on the footer - copyright or something like that?
